

OUTDOOR DART GAME

ABSTRACT

An outdoor dart game includes a plurality of darts having a shaft section and a tip member removably attachable to the front end portion of the shaft. A flight section is removably engageable with the shaft section and includes a plurality of flight members integral with each other and extending radially and outwardly from the longitudinal axis. Rubber covers may be connected to the shaft and flight sections respectively for providing a surface that a user may grip while handling the plurality of darts. Each dart may further include a flexible cord attachable to the shaft section and defining a loop for receiving a portion of a hand of a user so that same can throw the plurality of darts further. The game further includes a target pad, which may be selectively positioned at a remote distance from the plurality of darts.